When to seek urgent help

- Go to an emergency veterinarian or call immediately for difficulty breathing, collapse, seizures, severe bleeding, suspected toxin ingestion, choking, major trauma, a rapidly enlarging or painful abdomen, or inability to urinate.

Do not induce vomiting or give human medication unless a veterinarian or poison-control professional specifically instructs you to. Keep packaging or a photo of a suspected substance for the care team.

If you need to act quickly

- Call the clinic while preparing to leave; follow transport instructions
- Bring medication labels, packaging, or a photo of a suspected toxin
- Keep the puppy as calm and safe as possible; avoid placing hands near the mouth of an injured animal
- Save this sheet somewhere visible and add local emergency clinic details
